

ONE TO WORLD

As an organization whose mission is to advance global cooperation and intercultural understanding, we stand with our local and global communities against systemic racism and inequality.

The civil unrest we're seeing here in the U.S. is not new to the world, and systemic racism is a global pandemic that we must overcome together.

We strive to cultivate a sense of belonging through building relationships and a network of global citizens. But we cannot achieve global cooperation without first looking within our borders and celebrating our own intercultural communities and diversity.

One To World is committed to the fight against racism in all its forms and encourages other groups in international education to join us in speaking truth to power. Join us in the demand for justice for George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, Ahmaud Arbery, and the countless others whose lives were cut short by violence and inequality.

We believe it is crucial that we educate ourselves on what is happening and strive to learn ways in which we can support our community members during this painful and difficult time. Below are some resources we have found helpful to take action, educate ourselves, and dismantle patterns of racism and injustice in our personal and professional lives:

Center for Racial Justice in Education offers resources to educators who want to dismantle racism in their classrooms, homes, and communities.

Medium has a list of recommended readings, films, and podcasts for people of all ages to educate ourselves on racism and anti-racism.

Racial Equity Tools offers anti-racism training programs.

Crossroads provides many more links to anti-racism resources.

To advance global cooperation, One To World fosters intercultural understanding by creating face-to-face experiences among local communities, international students and Fulbright scholars.

Stay connected!

<http://bit.ly/otwcovidinfo>

